CARE GUIDE

Dig a hole twice the width of the container and 6 " deeper than the container. Take the soil from the hole and mix 1/2 of the soil with 1/2 compost. Back to Nature cotton bur compost or Lady bug revitalizer compost are excellent for planting roses. If you have very poor soil you can substitute Lady bug vortex potting soil for the rose mix. Take the rose to the hole and with a sharp knife or scissors, cut the pot off. Do this by taking the knife or scissors and inserting it in the drain hole and carefully cut to the next drain hole. Repeat this procedure until you have cut the bottom off Do not cut the sides yet. Carefully lift the rose ( with the sides still on it ) by the rootball and place it into the hole you have made. If you have a grafted rose you will see a big knot at the base of the plant. Make sure the knot is slightly above ground level. Add or remove soil until you get it to the right level. Plant own root roses level with the ground. Once the rose is set, carefully take your knife and cut one side of the pot. Remove the pot by opening the sides and lifting it up. Make sure not to disturb the rootball. Once the pot has been removed take the soil mixture you have made and place it in the hole around the plant until it fills the hole up. Any soil left over can be put around the plant to form a water ring. Make this ring about 12 to 18 inches from the base of the plant. Water the rose in two times. Adding beneficial microbes from products like Thrive or Espoma Bio-tone starter plus will enhance rooting and plant growth. Feed your roses with Espoma Rose-tone fertilizer once a month for bigger roses and great looking foliage. Mulching your rose will help prevent water loss from evaporation and will also help control weeds. If you have any questions about planting, fertilizing, pruning or spraying call Fanick's Garden Center at (210)- 648-1303.
